The vast majority of the readings for this course are chapters from over a dozen books. Given the expense of having you purchase them and the copyright difficulty of getting permission and paying for duplicating all these materials and the limited number of students in the class, I have chosen to place multiple copies of the material on reserve in the library. All are available on 2 hour and overnight reserve.

Your grade will be determined by two components: (1) a paper at least (80%); and (2) class room performance including leading the discussion on specific topics, participating in discussion led by other students and myself, and attendance at most (20%).

I will lecture on and lead the discussion on the first topic heading below. After that each of you must choose one or more of the topic headings to lead the discussion. All readings listed in boldface are the responsibility of everyone to read. All other readings should be read by the presenter(s), and discussed if appropriate.
1. The Law and Economics of Marriage and Divorce

Read the third and fourth article as well as either of the first two articles.
