This course will address the statutes, regulations, cases, and policy issues involved in the employment relationship. It will cover the legal boundaries in the life-cycle of the employee-employer balance of rights and duties.

The course materials will be cases and statutes. There is no textbook. A list of the cases and statutes (and citations) is provided.

Class participation is required. You are expected to read all of the reading assignments listed for a class. Also, you will “choose” several cases and be expected to be able to be the lead student in discussing them in the class(es) where they are covered. Details will be provided in the first class.

The grade for the class is the exam, though participation will be added in close cases.